The C-Suite Outreach Playbook

Innovative Ways to Reach & Book Decision-Makers

---

A practical field guide for the sales team. Every touch, every script, every tactic — engineered to get in front of the executives who matter most and convert them into appointments.

YOUR WEDGE

One Message. Every Touch.

Every call, voicemail, message, and email drives to one idea. Lead with this — not with your company, not with your product. The wedge is what gets you the fifteen minutes.

► THE WEDGE — SAY IT WORD FOR WORD

"I work with companies like yours and typically find 10 to 40 percent in costs they're currently overpaying — without changing vendors or disrupting operations. I'd like to do a quick apples-to-apples comparison for you. It takes 15 minutes and it's free."

It's Specific

"10 to 40 percent" is a claim an executive can test. Numbers create the mental picture; adjectives don't.

Present Loss

You're saying money is leaking right now. Loss is a stronger motivator than gain.

Removes Fear

"Without changing vendors" kills the objection before it forms. They fear the project, not the savings.

LANGUAGE RULES

Say This, Not That

The exact words matter more than the tactic. Train every rep on these replacements.

✓ SAY THIS

"I typically find 10–40% in costs companies are overpaying."

X NOT THAT

"We can save you money on your expenses."

✓ SAY THIS

"I have Thursday at 10 or Friday at 2 — which is easier?"

X NOT THAT

"When are you free to connect sometime?"

HOW THE SEQUENCE WORKS

The Right Order Changes Everything

Email does not initiate the appointment. Email is a follow-up tool, not an opener. It confirms, sends the one-pager, and recaps. It does not break the ice with a C-level executive who gets 200 emails a day. The opener is a live human touch, in this priority order:

1

Warm Referral

2

Phone Opener

3

LinkedIn Warm-Up

4

Email Follow-Up

THE PHONE OPENER

20 Seconds to Stay on the Line

You have one breath before they decide to stay on the line. No warm-up, no "how are you today." Lead with the wedge. Then handle every response with a binary close.

► THE 20-SECOND PHONE OPENER

"[Name], I'll be brief — I work with companies like yours and typically find 10 to 40 percent in costs they're overpaying. I'd like to do a quick apples-to-apples comparison — 15 minutes, no cost. I've got Thursday at 10 or Friday at 2. Which is easier?"

IF THEY SAY "SEND ME SOMETHING"

"Happy to — but it only matters once I plug in your numbers. Give me 15 minutes and the email I send after will actually mean something. Thursday or Friday?"

IF THEY SAY "WE'RE HAPPY"

"Most of the people I show this to are — right up until they see the number. That's exactly why it's worth 15 minutes."

► THE VOICEMAIL (UNDER 25 SECONDS)

RANKED BY YIELD

Six Plays. One Wedge.

Twelve tactics is a menu. These six are the playbook for C-suite specifically — ranked by yield. Each carries the same wedge; only the delivery changes.

WARM REFERRALS & INTRODUCTIONS

- 1 Executives engage when outreach comes through someone they trust. A referral skips the gatekeeper and borrows credibility instantly. Always your first move.

THE COST-COMPARISON OFFER

- 2 It IS the wedge, packaged as a deliverable. A free, no-obligation apples-to-apples comparison is concrete, low-risk, and self-evidently valuable.

DATA-BACKED PEER CASE STUDIES

- 3 Executives trust results from companies that look like theirs more than any claim you make about yourself. Lead with proof, not promises.

EXECUTIVE ROUNDTABLES

- 4 Peers and learning are two things the C-suite never turns down. An exclusive, relevant roundtable is an invitation, not a pitch — and it positions you as a convener.

PERSONALIZED VIDEO MESSAGES

- 5 A 60–90 second video addressing them by name cuts through a text-only inbox and proves you did the work. Loom or similar tools make this fast.

VALUE-FIRST LINKEDIN

- 6 LinkedIn is where executives already are. Engage genuinely first, then connect with an immediate, specific offer — not a generic "let's network."

EVERY TOUCH ENDS WITH ONE

Always Make the Ask

A touch with no specific ask is a wasted touch. Never close with "let's connect" or "let me know." Always offer a concrete, binary choice. Two specific times convert far better than "when are you free?" You're making it a small yes/no — not an open-ended scheduling project.

◆ THE BINARY CLOSE — ALWAYS USE THIS FORMAT

"I have [Day] at [Time] or [Day] at [Time] — which is easier for you?"

Never ask "when are you free?" — it creates work for them. Give them two options and let them pick one. That's the entire close.

A NOTE ON COMPLIANCE

Stay Sharp. Stay Clean.

We're in financial services, so words like "guarantee," "overpaying," and specific savings percentages can draw regulatory scrutiny if they can't be substantiated. Two rules:

RULE 01 — BACK THE NUMBER

Only cite the 10–40% range and peer results where you can show the math. "Apples to apples" is a promise to prove it — keep the proof handy.

RULE 02 — RUN CLAIMS PAST COMPLIANCE

Before any guarantee or savings figure goes in writing — email, one-pager, video caption — make sure it clears standard review.

△ THE GOLDEN RULE OF C-SUITE OUTREACH

Personalization, research, and a real number for their business — every time. Generic outreach gets deleted. Specific outreach gets appointments.

THE PLAYBOOK IN THREE WORDS

Specific. Personal. Persistent.

Every C-suite door opens with the right wedge, delivered the right way, at the right time. The scripts are loaded. The sequence is set. Now go execute.

LEAD WITH

The Wedge — a specific number, not a pitch

FOLLOW WITH

The Sequence — human touch first, email last

CLOSE WITH

The Binary Ask — two times, one decision
